

Cornell Glee

One of the events of the holiday season will be the concert and dancing party given by the Cornell Glee club Monday evening. December 26. The concert will be given at the Boyd theater and many reservations for tickets have been made and most of the boxes taken. The dance which follows the concert will be given at the Rome hotel by the local Alumni of Cornell university. The ball room is to be specially decorated with college colors, Praceding the concert, Mr. and Mrs. Clement Chase will give a reception from four to six, that the visitors may have an oppor tunity of meeting the young women of this city.

A feature of the program at the concert will be a solo by Mr. Herbert French, who represents the local alumni. The lower boxes will be occupied by representatives of different accols and colleges and decorated in college colors. Stanley Rosewater has taken one of the lower boxes and all of his guests will be former students of the University of Michi gan; Osgood Eastman reserved one box for Amherst college; Harry Pierpont, Dartmouth; and Arthur Wakeley for Cornell. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Williams secured one of the upper boxes as did Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Towle. Local students of Yale and Harvard were anxious to have a box, bu if this is made impossible a crowd of them will have seats together in the body of the garments of the well dressed mun are reflected in the dress clothes. When a snug fitting business coat is in vogue, the dress coat conforms; when the busthers coat is loose with wide shoulders, these characteristics are repeated In the dress coat.

The fashionable dress coat for this season follows in general lines the recognized tendencies of the season's styles, displaying shoulders of moderate narrowness, a collar that fits enugly around the neck, while the coat itself is shorter than last year and fits gracefully to the figure, thus giving a neat and comfortable appearance, yet preserving case of movement. The coat is waisty, with narrow back, and is finished with small, plain sleeves. The talls are cut away below the waist, just covering the thighs, ending, after an easy curve, in a square bottom.

The front of the coat exhibits a soft rolling lapel with a convex crease line; below the end of the roll the cont. is cut away smartly, with a noticeable dip to the lower edge of the fore part. The number of buttons may be three or four, according to the taste of the wearer. There may be an equal number of buttonholes, or less if the roll is brought lower.

For the waistcoat either a shawl roll or a no-collar vest may be worn, though the latter is the more popular of the two. The modified V-shape of opening continues, although the Ushape is more pronounced in the conservative costume. The points are shorter than last year and the angle is not so acute.

Trousers are a little smaller, both as to length and width. Properly adjusted, they just reach the instep. The outside seams are f.nished with braid, one or two rows, according to choice. Dress garments are proceeding slowly but surely toward greater liberality in choice of materials-even, perhaps, to a bit of informality. Formerly black broadcloth was the only accepted material for the making of a dress coat; but the man who is about to have one made in conformity with the season's style may exercise a choice extending over a considerable field. Several of the woolens now in favor show perceptible natterns.

The prime favorites in mater als are the unfinished worsteds, which are used for dress coats, dinner coats and dress overcoats-preferably in the rougher weaves. The old-fashioned. always-in-favor twill weave is obtainable by the ultra conservative man; but he who desires some little novelty will find that the black unfinished worsteds are woven in pleasing though inconspicuous patterns-diagonals, herring bones, stripes, bird's-eye and pebble weaves. Everything formal is black this season; even the darker Oxfords have been passed by as material for the dress coat. But for the dinner coat. Oxford gray seems to have the preference-perhaps to emphasize the difference between formality and informality. It comes in about the same weaves and patterns as the more formal cloths, but in the combinations of black and gray yarns the patterns are more distinct; where a black eilk thread is introduced as an ornamental stripe, it stands out strongly against the gray background.

But the dinner coat is by no means gaudy or "loud;" the lighter shades of gray ar tabooed; the darker the Oxford the better; a stripe is preferred, but other fancy weaves are allowable.

In contrast with the soberness of the dress and dinner coats is the divergence permitted in the matter of waistcoats. These have become quite elaborate, although the somewhat oldfashioned white pique waistcoat is still good form. Among men who pride themselves on their correctness, however, one may observe many with allk waistcoats, in well nigh numberless

It is true that colors are barred. white and pearl alone being good form, but all sorts of patterns are displayed from which to make choice -herringbones, stripes, lines, blocks, checks and fancy figures. Among the most striking of these are heavy French cords, in combination with a fabric stripe; while light zig-zag diagonals, varied by raised blocks, conventional designs stamped into the fabric, and heavy diagonals, are to be seen on men of fashion. The cotton vestings, naturally, have followed the lead of the more expensive silk, and are to be procured in most of the patterns affected by the latter, but only in white.

All the patterns shown in dress waistcoats are found in dinner vestings as well; the combinations of black and white, in silk or silk and cotton, with the widest latitude possible permitted, make the latter more striking and distinctive than the former.

It is Possible to Reduce Flesh Without Die ing or Exercise

It is not only possible, but being done everywhere. Exercise, unless carefully superintended by a onysician and expert athletic Director may easily do a deal of harm to the great overburdened fleshy body. The untutored fat man and woman determined to get thin are only too likely to overstrain their fat encumbered muscles by their awkward, Ill-advised gymnastics, and so cause nerve and mucle troubles that may develop into something far worse than a little too much flesh. Same way with dieties. Starvation is certainly effective if kept up long and faithfully enough, but it is almost certain to injure the nutritive process and so weaken the patient constitutionally, while it is abominable torture, of course, especially to a good-natured, high-living, fleshy man or woman.

Fortunately neither dieting nor exercising are required or desirable if one uses the right remedy for reducing fat, and strange to say, the remedy is a simple, wholesome home mixture, the ingertients of which are obtainable at any drug store for a few cents. This mixture is as follows: & os Marmola, & os. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, % as Peppermint Water, and the proper amount to take it one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime. This mixture takes the fat off rapidly but naturally, so that no wrinkies are formed and no harm is done to the stomach, as is so frequently the case with "Patent" or "secret" advertisad remedies.—Adv.

On all streets on which there are street car tracks, and on all hills which cross or terminate on streets having street car tracks, there is a CONSTANT DANGER to those indulging in the exhilarating sport of coasting.

Men and women, as well as boys and girls, have lost their lives, or have been seriously injured by dashing into moving or standing cars on their sleds or travelers.

Why jeopradize your lives by coasting where the hazard is so great, when there are so many places in this city of hills, where this sport may be indulged in with perfect safety?
